Price from: 1 050 €

DISCOVER HIGH-ALTITUDE MOUNTAINEERING WITH AN ASCENT OF THE VINCENT PYRAMID

This trip is designed for those looking to discover high-altitude mountaineering progressively and climb their first 4000-metre peak. The first two days in the Mont Blanc massif, including a night at a mountain hut above the Tour Glacier, provide an opportunity to gradually become accustomed to altitude and learn essential mountaineering skills, including the use of crampons and an ice axe. We then travel to the Italian side of the Monte Rosa massif to climb the Vincent Pyramid (4215 m).

AN ACCESSIBLE BUT PHYSICALLY DEMANDING INTRODUCTION TO HIGH ALTITUDE

Designed as an introduction to high-altitude mountaineering, this trip remains physically demanding. The consecutive days in the mountains and the ascent above 4000 metres require good physical fitness and regular endurance training. If you are unsure about your level, our team can help you choose the most suitable program.

ITINERARY

Day 1

Walk up to the Albert 1er Hut (2702 m)

We start from the village of Le Tour (1450 m) and take the lifts to near the Col de Balme (2100 m). A traversing path followed by the moraine of the Tour Glacier leads us to the Albert 1er Hut (2702 m). After a break at the hut, we head onto the Tour Glacier for a mountaineering skills session focusing on the use of crampons and an ice axe. Overnight at the hut.

Vertical ascent: 600 m

Day 2

Ascent of Tête Blanche (3421 m) | Overnight in Chamonix

We head out by the light of our headtorches and quickly reach the Tour Glacier, where we put on our crampons. We follow the gentle slopes of the glacier to the summit of Tête Blanche (3421 m), with views of the Aiguille du Chardonnet (3824 m) and the Trient Glacier. We descend by the same route to the hut and then to the village of Le Tour. Overnight in Chamonix.

Vertical ascent: 715 m - Vertical descent: 1320 m

Day 3

Walk up to the Gnifetti Hut (3648 m)

Morning transfer to Gressoney-Staffal in the Aosta Valley, at the foot of the Italian side of the Monte Rosa massif. We take the lifts from Staffal to the Indren Glacier (3275 m). A short glacier traverse then leads us to the Gnifetti Hut (3648 m), where we spend the night.

Vertical ascent: 370 m

Day 4

Ascent of the Vincent Pyramid (4215 m)

We leave the hut at dawn and climb the Lys Glacier to the summit of the Vincent Pyramid (4215 m). Depending on the level of the group and the conditions, your guide may suggest continuing to the Col du Lys (4250 m), which offers a magnificent panorama over the Monte Rosa massif. We descend by the same route before returning to the valley and travelling back to Chamonix in the middle of the afternoon.
