Price from: 3 510 €

A Legendary Summit

The Matterhorn (4,478 m), with the purity of its lines and the striking steepness of its faces, embodies the ideal mountain that every alpinist dreams of climbing one day. Its ascent is a true reference, both for the beauty of the summit and the strength of its history. The first ascent of the Matterhorn in 1865 had a major impact and marked the history of alpinism forever. It ended, however, in tragedy: several members of the rope team, including the Chamonix guide Michel Croz, lost their lives during the descent. The north face of the Matterhorn forms, together with those of the Eiger (3,967 m) and the Grandes Jorasses (4,208 m), the famous trilogy of the great north faces of the Alps.

Hörnli Ridge - Our guided program

The Hörnli Ridge is the normal route on the Swiss side of the Matterhorn. Mainly rocky, it offers a sustained but technically moderate climb (3b, sections of 4b), facilitated by the presence of fixed ropes. However, the ascent should not be underestimated. It requires confident and efficient movement on rock, good physical condition and the ability to maintain a steady pace in a high-altitude environment. We offer this ascent as a 5-day program designed to optimise acclimatisation, preparation and success. You climb one-to-one with your guide, allowing for a fully personalised approach and continuous adaptation to conditions and your pace.

A preparation tailored to your objective

This program includes two dedicated preparation days, followed by a rest day before the summit attempt, allowing you to approach the climb in the best possible conditions. Our guiding is based on detailed knowledge of the route and mountain conditions, ensuring optimal safety and decision-making throughout the ascent. The program can be adapted to your specific needs, with additional preparation days if required.

ITINERARY

Day 1

Route from Pointe Helbronner | Night in the Torino Hut (3370m)

Before undertaking the ascent of the Matterhorn, it is essential for your body to acclimate to the altitude. Your guide must also assess your technical skills to ensure they align with the requirements of such a climb. This step also provides the opportunity to make necessary adjustments to fully prepare you. Example of route : Aiguilles d'Entrèves traverse (3600m) or Freshfield arete on Tour Ronde (3793m). Night in Torino Hut.

Route from the Torino hut

This second day will reinforce the essential process of acclimating your body to the altitude while providing you with the opportunity to make any necessary adjustments. Example of route : Ascent of the normal route of the Dent du Géant (4,013m), allowing you to climb one of the flagship peaks of the Mont Blanc massif and become acquainted with the use of fixed ropes.

Day 3

Rest day

Rest/spare day depending on weather conditions.

Day 4

Ascent to Hörnli Hut (3260m)

Leave Zermatt in the mid-morning. Ascend to the hut from the Schwarzsee station (2583m), reached via the lift system. Familiarize yourself with the first set of fixed ropes that we will use the following night. The walk takes approximately 2½ hours.

Day 5

Ascent of Matterhorn (4 478m) | Hörnli Ridge

We leave the hut in the early morning. The Hörnli Ridge is a long route mainly consisting in mixed rock tiers interspersed with steeper sections equipped with fixed ropes. The final section is a 40° snow slope. Descent is via the same route downclimbing and using rappels to reach the hut. We return to Zermatt via the Schwarzsee lift system and continue on to Chamonix. 8-10 hours walking return trip hut-to-hut.
