We leave this morning from Le Mont village in Servoz (2,952ft) to reach the Pormenaz chalets, by the South side. We regularly hike up and the Mont-Blanc slowly appears, behind the Aiguillettes des Houches. After arriving to the chalets and having a conversation with the shepherd, we go across the mountain pastures to reach the Pormenaz lake (6,381ft). After a small effort, we finally arrive to the Moëde Anterne hut where we spend the night.

Day 2

Moëde Anterne hut - Salenton pass - Vallorcine.

We set off to conquer the Salenton pass (8 287ft) after crossing the wild Villy valley. At the pass, Mont Buet is revealed, and we quickly change landscape to move between scree and desert areas where only a few animal and plant species remain. After lunch, we begin the descent towards the village of Buet, passing by the Refuge de la Pierre à Bérard. The descent is long and technical. Warning: The ascent of Buet may be cancelled depending on the conditions or the physical fitness of the participants. Only the guide is responsible for deciding whether it is feasible.
