MOUNTAINEERING - AIGUILLE DU TOUR

Duration: 2 | Fitness: ▲▲▲△△ | Technique: ▲▲△△△ | Price from: 545 €

DISCOVER MOUNTAINEERING ON THE AIGUILLE DU TOUR

The Aiguille du Tour is one of the most suitable peaks in the Mont Blanc massif for a first mountaineering experience. Its normal route from the Albert 1er Hut offers a two-day introduction to the different aspects of high-altitude mountaineering: an overnight stay in a mountain hut, moving on a glacier, using crampons and an ice axe, followed by an easy rocky section to reach the summit. From the top, the panorama extends across the Mont Blanc massif and the peaks of the Swiss Valais.

AN ACCESSIBLE BUT PHYSICALLY DEMANDING FIRST ASCENT

This ascent is our introductory mountaineering trip and requires no previous high-altitude mountaineering experience. However, you need a good level of fitness to spend several hours at altitude and complete the vertical ascent and descent involved. Regular endurance activity is recommended. If you are unsure about your level, our team can help you choose the most suitable program.

ITINERARY

Day 1

Walk up to the Albert 1er Hut (2702 m)
We start from the village of Le Tour (1450 m) and take the lifts to near the Col de Balme (2100 m). A traversing path, followed by the moraine of the Tour Glacier, leads us to the Albert 1er Hut (2702 m). Set above the Tour Glacier, the hut offers impressive views of the surrounding peaks, particularly towards the end of the day.
Vertical ascent: 600 m

Day 2

Ascent of the Aiguille du Tour (3542 m)
We head out by the light of our headtorches. We quickly reach the Tour Glacier and put on our crampons before climbing to the Col Supérieur du Tour (3289 m), which takes us onto the Swiss side and the Trient Glacier. We continue to the foot of the Aiguille du Tour and reach the summit (3542 m) via a few sections of easy rock climbing. We descend by the same route and return to the village of Le Tour by mid-afternoon.
Vertical ascent: 840 m - Vertical descent: 1440 m
