SKI TOURING - MONT BLANC

Duration: 3

Level: ▲▲▲▲▲

Price from: 1 620 €

Skiing Mt Blanc is a dream that many skiers share; this is an exceptional trip, which leads you through some glaciers areas with the promise of unforgettable moments. Ski touring up to the summit of Mont Blanc in the spring is a much greater effort than climbing in the summer time. It requires a serious physical training and expert skiing skills. So that your ascent takes place in the best conditions, we propose a 3-day trip with two overnights at the Grands Mulets hut. By cutting the descent, this option allows you to better manage the effort and the effects of altitude. The ascent on 2 days remains possible depending on conditions and on your experience.

No online booking - Contact us. Only in private booking

Day 1 : Ascent to the Grands Mulets hut

Departure for the cable car of the Aiguille du Midi - we stop on the first stretch: the Plan de l'Aiguille (2 310m). We begin the crossing on the old trail in the direction of the old "glaciers cable car". We continue our progress until the junction between the glacier of Bossons and the glacier of Taconnaz. The refuge of the Grands Mulets appears in this majestic setting, nestled on a rocky promontory in the heart of the high mountain. Overnight at the Grands Mulets refuge (3 051m). Vertical ascent: 950m

Day 2 : Summit then back to the Grands Mulets hut

At first light, we start from the hut. Classic route "Des plateaux" or depending the conditions, the north face of Dôme du Goûter (slopes up to 40°) to reach the normal route. Ski up until Abri Vallot (4 362m). From there, depending on conditions, go and back by foot to reach the summit through Arête des Bosses. If the conditions are good, we can be skied on the north face. Then, in any way, we continue to go down through Grand & Petit plateau to reach the hut. Vertical ascent: 1 750m - Vertical descent: 1 750m

Day 3 : Second part of the descent

We have a late start and go back to Plan de l'Aiguille or ski down to the Mont-Blanc tunnel if snow is sufficient. Vertical descent: 850m or 1 750m
