VALLEE BLANCHE - SKIING

Duration: 1 | Difficulty: ▲▲▲△△ | Price from: 175 €

AIGUILLE DU MIDI - 3,842 M

From the very first step onto the ridge at the Aiguille du Midi, you're immersed in an unforgettable adventure. With the highest peaks of the Alps all around you, the Vallée Blanche offers a 15 km descent and 2,000 vertical meters through the heart of the Mont Blanc glaciers — a legendary off-piste - backcountry experience that starts with a short ridge walk secured by fixed ropes, and finishes with a return by the Montenvers train or, with exceptional snow, skiing all the way down to Chamonix.

A LEGENDARY RUN — BUT NOT A PISTE

The Vallée Blanche is pure high-mountain off-piste - backcountry skiing. It is not a groomed slope, and enjoying it safely requires both skill and fitness.

• Altitude & ridge: The start at 3,842 m can challenge those sensitive to altitude. The 15-minute walk down the ridge, skis on your pack and crampons on your boots, already demands energy.
• Moguls: Heavy skier traffic shapes the snow into bumps, making parts of the descent as demanding as a steep, narrow black run.
• Powder: After a snowfall, expect deep, untracked powder — several dozen centimeters that can surprise even strong piste skiers.

ARE YOU READY FOR THE VALLÉE BLANCHE?

The Vallée Blanche is not comparable to a resort run. Think of it as a full backcountry adventure: unmarked, on glaciers, and at high altitude. A preparatory off-piste day is strongly recommended if you're unsure about your skills. To fully enjoy this descent, you should be able to:

• ski a steep, mogulled black run in Europe — equivalent to a sustained "double black diamond" in North America — while staying in control for several hours,
• manage the physical effort of a high-altitude outing.

⚠ If your level is not sufficient, you will go back down by cable car — no refund possible
