Chamonix - Col du Brévent - Aiguillette des Houches - Servoz

We start in the heart of Chamonix, quickly gaining elevation via the Planpraz cable car, which takes us to 2,000 meters above sea level. The hike begins here in the alpine pastures facing Mont Blanc. We ascend to the Col du Brévent, cross toward the summit of Brévent, and then explore the Carlaveyron Nature Reserve. Our route takes us past the Aiguillette des Houches before descending to Servoz, where we will spend the night.

Day 2

Passy - Varan

Today, we explore the first sedimentary massif of our trip. At the foot of the Fiz mountain range, we cross the southern face toward the Varan alpine pastures. Here, the history of mountain farming intertwines with that of outdoor sports. It's also an incredible spot to observe ibex and chamois, all with views of Mont Blanc -discovered the day before- and the Aravis range, which we'll explore the next day. Night in Cordon.

Day 3

Plateau des Bénés - Col de Niard - Col des Aravis

The Aravis Range is world-renowned for its famous cheese, Reblochon. This is a mountain steeped in tradition, celebrated for its authenticity and terroir. You will traverse stunning landscapes and heritage sites as we cross from one valley—and even one department—to another. Indeed, we will leave Haute-Savoie and briefly enter Savoie. Upon reaching the Col des Aravis, we will be transferred to the typical Aravis villages of La Clusaz and Le Grand-Bornand, where we will spend the night.

Elevation gain : 3445 feet - Vertical loss : 2200 feet - Distance : 9.5 miles

Day 4

Crossing Glières plateau

How to Cross Haute-Savoie Without Passing Through the Glières Plateau

A key site of the French Resistance, the Glières Plateau was the stage for battles that changed the course of history. This iconic location and its story are explored throughout a day dedicated to this theme.

Yet, beyond its past, the plateau is also defined by its present: pristine nature and local culinary delights waiting to be discovered. Overnight in Talloire

Elevation gain : 3280 feet - Vertical loss : 2165 feet - Distance : 9.3 miles

Day 5

Mont Baron and Mont Veyrier : the Annecy Lake's balconies

After a restful night by the lakeside, we'll take to the heights to admire it from above. We'll ascend the ridges of Mont Baron and Mont Veyrier, where alpine forests and open clearings reveal breathtaking panoramas of the lake and the foothills of the Bauges massif. This stage is the perfect prelude to exploring the charming old town where you'll spend the night.

The most famous mountain around Annecy is undoubtedly Mont Parmelan. A suspended valley perched on the outskirts of the city, this hike will leave a lasting impression and introduce you to the other unexplored mountains of Haute-Savoie: Salève to the north and Chablais to the northeast.

With this journey complete, you'll leave knowing you've experienced one of the most stunning treks possible—right in the heart of a region rich with stories and diverse landscapes.
